Long-term Care Agent Lester Robinson Applauds U.S. News & World Report for "6 Ways to Pay"

East Amherst, NY February 27, 2019 -- Sticker shock holding you back? Are you pretty sure you can't afford long-term care insurance -- for yourself, spouse, aging parent, or other loved one -- even though you want the protection? "Then an article in U.S. News & World Report has some good news for you," says Lester Robinson, NY-based agent with ACSIA Partners LLC.

The article, 6 Ways to Pay for Long-Term Care if You Can't Afford Insurance, offers cogent advice and perspective, according to Robinson, who offers capsule descriptions of the ways in reverse order:

(6) Medicaid: When all other options fail, the government is there, but its help may fall short of your expectations.

(5) Personal savings: Self-insure by putting money aside for care in a nursing home, assisted-living facility, or your own home.

(4) Veteran benefits: Those who have served in any branch of the military, during qualified periods of conflict, may be eligible for financial aid to pay for care. Spouses may also qualify for benefits.

(3) Health savings account (HSA): You may finance future long-term care costs by opening an HSA if you have a qualified high-deductible health insurance plan. Within limits, your monthly contributions to your HSA are tax deductible.

(2) Add a long-term care rider to a life insurance policy: This can be an affordable option if regular long-term care insurance seems expensive, or you don't qualify for it.

(1) Take another look at a regular policy: In light of the alternatives, long-term care insurance may not be as "expensive" as you thought. As the U.S. News article says, "Don't assume long-term care insurance is financially out of reach."

"For details of each method, please read the full article," says Robinson. "It takes just a few minutes, and just might improve your life for years to come."

Robinson's organization, ACSIA Partners LLC, helps families plan for care needs through long-term care insurance, life insurance or annuities with long-term care riders, critical illness insurance, and other solutions ranging from health savings accounts to Medicare supplement plans.
